

TRAVEL TRAINING

R&D has successfully trained thousands of adults with developmental disabilities to access the public transit systems within their communities. Participants train to utilize public transit systems between their home and instructional facility or place of business.

Travel Training results in far-extending benefits. The Regional Center/School District benefits in the seats that become available on the curb-to-curb service for riders who cannot participate in mobility training. This brings the agency cost containment while continuing to serve the needs of their client population.

Individuals who participate in the training, benefit from a more independent lifestyle, increased confidence, better employment options, and the opportunity to expand their social activities.
